DISCOURAGING as it was, the London economic conference had a few lighter shades. Mrs. Hull and I attended King George's reception. We had also planned a much-needed little outing which required us to go from the reception to a country place some miles distant. The strain of trying to build something at the conference with inadequate materials was wearing me down, and I felt obliged, in justice to my condition, to get this rest at all hazards. The crowd at the king's reception, including delegates from the 66 countries, was so tremendous that, after waiting for a considerable time until further delay would render my trip impossible, I suggested that my associates and I depart quietly without notice by anyone. I had failed in an effort to reach the king by a near cut. I learned later that I had scarcely left when the king sent for me but was told I was not on the grounds.

I thereupon made known to the proper British officials my desire to call on the king at his pleasure. An immediate, favorable reply came back. I found the king very democratic. He received me cordially and spoke highly of the American people. We then had an easy, friendly conversation of some 30 minutes on the conference and its objectives. We agreed on the importance of the topics listed on the agenda and the necessity for a suitable solution of each. King George remarked he expected to see me further at a later stage of the conference. That moment, unfortunately, did not arrive.

KING GEORGE VI
Mr. Hull found him "very democratic"

The conference began to show unmistakable signs of bogging down. At that moment we got word that the President was sending Raymond Moley to London as a liaison man to inform us about the latest developments in Washington. Vivid press dispatches began to flow in about Moley's dramatic airplane flight to see the President on Mr. Roosevelt's yacht and the bustle and speculation attending Moley's departure from Washington and New York. It was made to appear to the public everywhere that he was coming with new instructions or a message from the President or possibly even to take over the American delegation. From that moment on for the seven days he was on th ehigh seas, the conference

Fuel Relief in Sight Here As Gas Reserves Build Up

Slight relief was in sight today for Marion's worried citizens whose hot water tanks are heated with gas, as slightly warmer weather gave the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. a chance to build up the dangerously low pressure in its mains sufficiently that water heaters could again be lighted.

The Associated Press reported as company officials said today's slight improvement meant only that gas could be spared for hot water and that all other means of making the supply go around must remain in force.

Marion officials of the company stated that locally the gas shortage is still critcal and that the continued compliance by bars, restaurants, and business houses with the company's request to keep temperatures just above freezing" and the 8 p. m. closing hour for taverns is still vitally necessary to preserve local supplies. Marion's state liquor stores, which uses gas heat has been closed for the duration of the emergency.

An order received from the state public utility commission by C. E. Sechrist, Marion manager of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co., this morning directed, "Curtail to the fullest possible extent all gas not immediately essential to the public health, safety and welfare. This order to remain in force for the duration of the emergency." Compliance with the order by local bars and merchants was reported as good, Sechrist stated.

The Manufacturers' Light & Heat Co. at Steubenville said its gas "pressure was dangerously low" yesterday and that it cut off fuel from 600 homes because it "feared an explosion," The Associated Press said.

Slight moderation in the cold brought from the Ohio Gas Co. announcement that 25 per cent of the normal production supply of gas was restored. Even this note of optimism faded, however, before a forecast of colder weather in northern portions of Ohio.

The federal power commission in Washington reported last night natural gas from five states is being diverted to western Ohio to meet an emergency among residential users.

"We have increased Ohio fuel's supply by 4,000,000 (million) cubic feet to a total of 21,500,000 cubic feet a day since Tuesday night," Ed Buddrus, Pa[illegible] president, said.

The federal power [illegible] said earlier it had authorized an additional 15,000,000 cubic feet daily. C. I. Weaver, president of the Ohio firm, said the 4,000,000 feet already supplied would be a part of the 15,000,000.

Last night's low temperature of five above zero marked the first time in four nights that the temperature remained above zero. The high temperature recorded here yesterday was 25 above and by 8 a. m. today had climbed to 15 above zero.

A forecast of cloudy tonight with some snow or sleet with more snow or sleet expected Saturday promised that snow shovels would still be needed here.

HOUSE TAKES CUT AT BIG MONEY BILL

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—The house appropriations committee brought in the first big money bill of the 1948 session today with a 6 per cent cut in President Truman's spending estimates.

Among other things, the committee whacked the President's own emergency fund from $1,000,000 to $700,000. It said he has been using it for things which "can not be classified on any reasonable basis" as emergencies.

The bill is to provide funds for the presidential office and 22 other government agencies for the fiscal year starting July 1. The committee recommended a total of $991,583,551. The President's estimate, through the budget bureau, was $1,047,798,864.

The committee cut $100,000 from the $400,000 requested for the President's council of economic advisers.

It threw out a $504,000 item to get ready for any possible emergency which might make it necessary to draft men into the Army again.

DRAFT FORMS FOR PAYMENT OF OHIO BONUS

Governor Declares First Payments Not To Come Before May 1.

Special to The Star

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 30 — All living veterans who apply for the Ohio bonus will be required to answer 20 simple questions, Major General Chester W. Goble, director of the World War II compensation fund, announced today.

He said the exact nature of the application form will be made known during the final week of the statewide education and training program before application forms are made available March 1, 1948, to veterans in each of Ohio's 88 counties.

Forecast on Payments

Veterans of World War II can not expect to collect Ohio's bonus payments before May 1, Gov. Thomas J. Herbert said today, The Associated Press reported.

The governor, a member of the bonus sinking fund commission, made the statement after reports circulated the bonus payments would begin in March.

The commission was less definite than the governor in setting a payment date and issued this statement following a meeting this morning:

"It is impossible to say at this time when bonus payments will start."

General Goble urged each veteran planning to file an application to begin now to get his original discharge certificate or certificate of service papers in order and be ready to answer the following questions:

1. Veteran's full name.
2. Veteran's address.
3. Date of birth.
4. Service or serial numbers.
5. Name under which applicant served in the armed forces.
6. Was veteran on active duty Dec. 7, 1941?
7. Date active duty commenced if after Pearl Harbor day.
8. Date veteran was separated from active duty.
9. Date of beginning and date of ending of each period of service between Dec. 7, 1941, and Sept. 2, 1945, both dates inclusive, during which veteran was in domestic service.
10. Number of days in penal confinement as a result of sentence by court martial during domestic service.
11. Date of beginning and date of ending of each period of service between Dec. 7, 1941, and Sept. 2, 1945, both dates inclusive, during which veteran was in foreign service.
12. Number of days in penal confinement as a result of sentence by court martial during foreign service.
13. Indicate whether armed force in which service was performed was Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, or other.
14. Was separation from active duty by discharge, assignment to inactive status, or retirement?
15. Was veteran separated from active duty under honorable conditions?
16. Is veteran still on active duty in the armed forces of the United States? If so, a certificate of a commissioned officer is required certifying answers to preceding 15 questions.
17. Statement of residence and number of selective service board, if veteran had registered for the draft.
18. Statement of place of residence on Dec. 7, 1941, if on active duty at that time and place where it had been during one year preceding that day.
19. Statement of place of residence when veteran commenced active duty after Dec. 7, 1941, and place where it had been during one year preceding his first day of such active duty.
20. Has veteran applied for, or received, from a state other than Ohio a bonus or compensation based upon service in the armed forces of the United States in World War II.

Another form, to be known as Form 2, will be required for surviving spouse, children or parents of deceased veterans who plan to make beneficiary claims. Detailed requirements for beneficiaries will be made later.

Original Discharge Required

General Goble explained that every person making his application as a living veteran must [illegible] with it his "original discharge certificate or certificate of service[illegible]

Marion Given High Hospital Aid Priority

Assured Federal Funds for Either New Structure or Addition to Old.

Marion has been given a "high priority" rating under the $40,000,000 hospital construction program approved Thursday for Ohio by the state hospital advisory council, Mayor Harry L. Dowler said today.

The mayor and a committee from Marion attended a public hearing in Columbus yesterday afternoon on the federal-state plan for construction of additional hospital facilities over a five-year period. The program giving Marion a high rating was approved by the advisory council following the hearing.

The state plan approved by the 16-member advisory council embraces establishment of a co-ordinated hospital system in Ohio comprising three base areas, 19 intermediate areas and 53 rural areas, eligible for federal aid. These areas are entitled to $13,450,000 in federal funds over this period.

Center of Region

Marion has been designated as one of the intermediate areas. In addition the Marion hospital would serve as a regional center for adjacent "rural" hospital areas, Galion, Bucyrus and Kenton, so designated under the state plan.

The intermediate area plan calls for an adequate 100-bed hospital while rural areas are designated as those to be served by a 50-bed hospital.

The Marion area as set forth in the Ohio plan will include portions of Morrow, Union and Wyandot counties in addition to Marion county. Population to be served is approximately 64,000. Boundaries of the area will be made along township lines rather than county lines, it was indicated.

Priority for hospital construction was based on the percentage of required needs filled by existing hospitals. Marion is in the second highest priority group and one of the largest cities in that group.

First priority was given to predominantly rural areas with no port of needs met by acceptable hospital facilities.

Local Facilities Rated Low

Only 46 out of 96 beds at Marion hospital were rated acceptable in the survey of facilities, an unfavorable comparison with those in adjacent communities.

Mansfield had an acceptable bed rating of 217 out of 240, Galion's 32-bed capacity was rated 100 per cent, as was Bucyrus with 46, Delaware with 57 and Findlay with 76 beds.

Mayor Dowler said Marion has two courses of action which it can take in relation to the state plan.

"We can go ahead with our $200,000 approved for a permanent addition with a virtually assured grant of $100,000 in federal funds aiding in its construction, or w e can consider the possibility of a new hospital," he said.

Confers with Director

He conferred briefly yesterday with State Health Director John D. Porterfield concerning the Marion situation. It was Dr. Porterfield's suggestion that Marion officials meet with state health department officials in Columbus to

SECTION OF SCHOOL CEILING CRASHES

Seats Smashed at Harding; Third Fall in 4 Years.

Work of repairing damage to the West hall at Harding High school where a large portion of the ceiling fell sometime Wednesday night, was begun by workmen today.

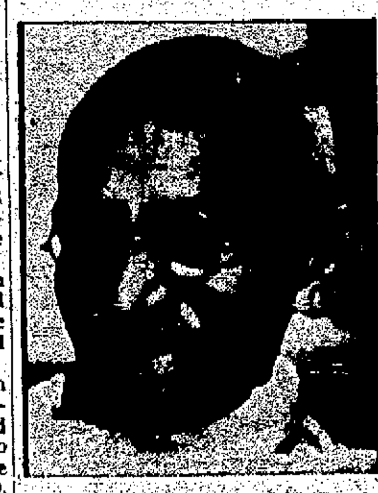

Tragedy would have resulted had the school been in session, Levi Welch, superintendent of buildings and grounds, said today, as approximately 12 or 15 square feet of plastering and metal lath fell, smashing four seats flat to the floor. The plastering was one to one and one-half inches thick.

An entire new ceiling of acoustical block will be put on and the ceiling will be dropped three feet, according to plans. While the room is out of use the floors will be sanded and minor repairs made.

This is the third time in four years the plastering has fallen from various spots in the [illegible] in West hall. The [illegible] is attributed to leaks in the roof which have rusted the [illegible] [illegible]

Shot Three Times By Hindu Youth While at Prayer

By The Associated Press

NEW DELHI, Jan. 30—Mohandas K. Gandhi was shot to death tonight by one of the Hindus he led to independence.

The frail and wizened little political and spiritual leader was the target of three bullets fired at close range at his prayer meeting on the lawn of the sumptuous Birla mansion, the estate of an Indian industrialist who long had supported Gandhi. He was 78.

Police arrested the assassin immediately. They said he was a Hindu from Poona.

Sobbing bitterly, Gandhi's personal secretary, S. Kalyanam, told The Associated Press:

"Bapu is dead."

Bapu is the affectionate name for Gandhi, meaning father. To millions of his followers, he was known as Mahatma, or great-souled one. His full name was Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi.

Bystanders said Gandhi slumped forward as the third shot rang out. He seemed unconscious as he was carried to his quarters in Birla house. The secretary said death followed within a half hour.

A crowd of several hundred persons formed about Birla house, many of them weeping.

Death came less than a year after he achieved his life's main goal of independence from Great Britain for the teeming subcontinent of India. Paradoxically, however, Gandhi considered his triumph a failure because India and her 400,000,000 people were divided into separate dominions of India (Hindu) and Pakistan (Moslem). The partition resulted in bloody, destructive communal warfare between Moslems on one side and Hindus and Sikhs on the other.

It was in an effort to end the bloodshed that Gandhi undertook this month the last of his many fasts. After five days in which he threatened to starve himself to death, Gandhi broke his fast Jan. 18 on the "pledge and counsel" of friends in both dominions. He said they had assured him of "complete unbroken friendship" between all communities.

During the tense days of his fast, some of the more militant shouted bitterly in the streets and before his living quarters:

"Let Gandhi die."

But there was every indication this was the view of a tiny minority, embittered by the communal warfare.

Bomb Exploded

Shortly after the fast, a bomb exploded near by prayer meeting, also in the Birla mansion estate, but did no harm. A Hindu was arrested.

Some Hindus, their womenfolk violated in the communal upheavals, had resented Gandhi's pleas for peace with the Moslems.

Bystanders said the assassin had mingled with the crowd at the prayer meeting. He was inconspicuous in khaki clothing which might have come from Army surplus stores. Suddenly, it was said, he drew a pistol and fired three times.

Gandhi undertook the recent fast against the advice of his physicians. He went without food for five days.

The effects of his gesture became noticeable at once. Peace, however uneasy, settled over New Delhi. Two days later, Jan. 21, the bomb exploded near Birla house.

Gandhi asked police to be lenient with the young Hindu who threw it.

"We should not harbor hatred," he said. "I will request the police not to trouble him but to have compassion toward him and make him see the righteous path."

Too Weak To Walk

Even as he spoke, the Hindu spiritual leader was too weak to walk from the effects of his long fast. He had been carried to that prayer meeting on a chair.

At one of his last prayer meetings a listener asked Gandhi to proclaim himself a reincarnation of God. Gandhi laughed. The speaker persisted and Gandhi, becoming impatient, told him to sit down and be quiet.

Gandhi had laid down a seven-point program as a formula for peace in India—his terms for sparing his own life through ending his fast.

He required Hindus should fraternize with Moslems on the next Mohammedan festival, as in the old days. He asked mosques which had been converted into Hindu temple or dwelling places be returned to their original users.

He recommended Moslems be made to feel as safe as they had before India's bloody riots; that those Moslems who fled to Pakistan be invited to return; that Moslems be guaranteed safety aboard trains. He asked that social boycotts of Moslems be abandoned, and that Moslems be given the right to live [illegible]

When he ended the fast, Gandhi said he was convinced a pledge of [illegible] harmony given him by Indian religious leaders would set the country back on the road to peace.

Fear Bloodshed

Indian leaders had expressed fear Gandhi's death would mean a bloodbath throughout the continent. Even so, there were some who paraded the streets shouting "Let Gandhi Die."

But the Mahatma (great-souled one) said when he ended his fast that fulfillment of the pledge would double "my intense wish to live a full span of life doing service to humanity * * * at least 125 years or, as some say, 133 years."

The communal leaders in New Delhi adopted Gandhi's program and set up a committee of 130 of all religions to meet nightly and review the progress toward Gandhi's aims.

On several occasions Gandhi had announced fasts "to the death." In 1947 he fasted for three days to protest Hindu-Moslem strife in Calcutta. This was his tenth fast, and he warned Hindu and Moslem leaders that more untoward incidents would mean he would continue his hunger strike "unto death."

Gandhi often said much of his philosophy was founded upon Jesus' sermon on the mount.

Gandhi believed in reincarnation.

"I think we all come back here again if we are not pure enough to enter heaven," he said.

Gandhi was born Oct. 2, 1869, at Porbander. He was reared in an anti-British atmosphere. His father had been a premier of several small native states and once had gone to jail rather than apologize to a British commissioner he had taken to task publicly.

Lead 400 Million

The frail and emaciated Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi led India's 400,000,000 people to his cherished goal of freedom from British crown rule, but the reward he received was bitter sorrow and disappointment. For the cause he had endured prisons and fasts. His favorite weapons for rousing the masses were civil disobedience campaigns and hunger strikes.

In his own eyes, the little Hindu ascetic was a failure at the hour of his greatest victory because freedom divided his country into two hostile dominions (he had sought a unified, independent India) and plunged his people into frightful communal [illegible]

WITNESS REPORT OF GANDHI KILLING

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Jan. 30—Robert Stimson, BBC correspondent, witnessed the assassination of Mohandas Gandhi.

He cabled these impressions:

"The shots did not sound very loud—they reminded me of firecrackers. When they were fired, Gandhi fell back.

"Immediately after this I saw some of Gandhi's entourage grappling with a heavy set man in a khaki bush coat. He had blood on him, no doubt from wounds inflicted by his assailants."

George Bernard Shaw, long a friend and admirer of Gandhi, commented sadly:

"It shows how dangerous it is to be good."

What's Ahead for Palestine

Major Problem for UN Seen In Government of Jerusalem

(Last of a Series of Articles)

By MAX HARRELSON
Associated Press Writer

One the major headaches of the United Nations in implementing the plan to partition Palestine will be the government of Jerusalem, long a chief trouble spot in the Holy Land.

Under the partition plan, Jerusalem will be ruled by the UN as an international territory entirely independent of the proposed Jewish and Arab countries which are to be carved out of Palestine.

While the governments of the projected new countries will be responsible for maintaining internal law and order within their respective territories, the UN itself will be solely responsible for preserving order in Jerusalem.

The task of setting up a government for Jerusalem and supervising its operation was assigned to the UN trusteeship council. That body already has begun work on a statue, which will serve as a constitution for the international zone, and expects to have it ready by April 29, the deadline set by the general assembly.

The council's major problem will be in actually setting up a government and security force which will be ready to take over when the British withdraw on or before Aug. 1.

This problem is complicated by several factors. One is the fact that Russia, one of the chief supporters of the partition scheme, is boycotting the trusteeship council. This raises the question: will Russia continue to boycott the council or will she abandon her present policy and attend council meetings so she may have a hand in the government of Jerusalem?

Another difficulty is the fact that the international zone will be an enclave in the middle of one part of the projectedArab country. This means that all travel to and from Jerusalem must be across Arab territory.

In the face of the present Arab hostility to the entire partition idea, this may prove difficult and hazardous even for UN officials. It might be next to impossible for Jews from the proposed Jewish country to visit Jerusalem.

A third major difficulty is the divided population of Jerusalem. The UN will find the problem of preserving order intensified by constant Arab-Jewish clashes within the city. This will make it essential for the UN to mantiain a large security force continuously on the alert.

Although the trusteeship council is responsible for the government of the international zone, the actual administration will be in the hands of a governor, chosen from some country outside Palestine.

THE OHIO FUEL OIL SITUATION:

So far, so good...but the critical months are still ahead!

OIL SAVED NOW WILL KEEP US WARM LATER

To date, voluntary saving of fuel oil by Ohio users has helped maintain a delicate balance between supply and demand. But the critical months, February and March, can upset that balance. (We are more fortunate than some other states, where some homes are going cold and fuel is being rationed.)

NOW—it IS important to conserve fuel oil in every practical way in your home heating.

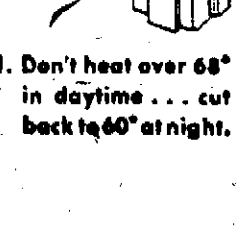

We feel, as we believe you do, that voluntary saving is better than rationing. And we believe, if everyone conserves some fuel oil, we will all get through February and March all right.

Anticipating an unprecedented demand this winter, Sohio rushed new production, and among other steps, built huge new storage facilities and began as long ago as last July publishing advertisements warning prospective customers against new installations. We also asked and are receiving the cooperation of our own customers in saving oil. From here on out, it's up to everyone who uses fuel oil.

If everyone saves a little — there'll be enough for all. For your own sake . . . for the sake of everyone in Ohio who needs fuel oil . . . won't you take a fresh look at these simple ways you can help?

It is important to conserve . . .

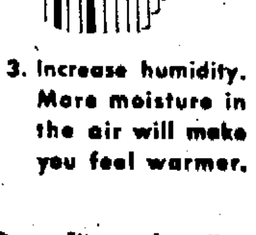

and you save fuel oil and money!

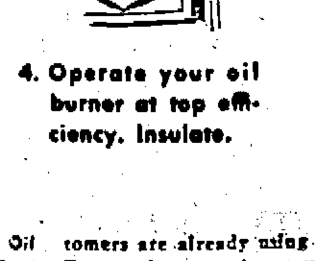

1. Don't heat over 68° in daytime . . . cut back to 60° at night.

2. Close off unused rooms. Close doors promptly. Draw shades at night.

3. Increase humidity. More moisture in the air will make you feel warmer.

4. Operate your oil burner at top efficiency. Insulate.

NO SCIOTO PLANT AID TO BIS SEEN IN '48

Will Not Cut Escapes This Year, Say Officials.

Acquisition of a part of the Scioto Ordnance plant site here for the worst cases among delinquent boys at the Boys' Industrial School near Lancaster will not relieve the problem of escapes from the institution this year, according to Governor Herbert, says a United Press dispatch from Columbus.

Commenting upon the complaints of Lancaster area residents that there were too many escapes from the school, the governor pointed out that the $100,000 appropriated by the legislature as a token to the federal government that the state would use the Scioto site would not be sufficient to provide rehabilitation required before the Marion site can be used.

State Welfare Director Charles E. Sherwood estimated $5,000,000 would be needed over a five-year period to bring the Marion site into full use. The actual rehabilitation program will probably get under way not before 1949.

A welfare department official recently suggested that the state buy the site outright from the federal government to avoid a stipulation that it must be used for a boys' institution for 25 years. The official suggested that the state needs a state penitentiary at the present time even more than it needs the type of institution being planned for Marion.

Governor Herbert said he would confer with director Sherwood and Boys' Industrial School Superintendent Harold L. Hayes on petitions he had received protesting the escape situation at Lancaster. The group presenting the petitions suggetsed that the state act to prevent escapes and suggested also that the boys be given distinctive uniforms, that the school farm be more securely fenced and that a warning siren be sounded when an escape is discovered.

Governor Herbert said the escapes last year were made by 165 youths of whom 26 were later transferred to Ohio penitentiary. Of the escapees, 63 ran away from the industrial farm more than once.

Your Good Health

By DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN

Rheumatic Fever Treatment

Though rheumatic fever has been designated as the No. 1 killer and crippler of children in the United States, it has its hopeful side. The first attack of this disease, which starts with fever and swelling and pain in the joints, and often ends with damage to the heart, may not result in very much injury to that all-important organ. But repeated attacks, even though mild, will, and for this reason treatment should center around preventing a recurrence of this dread disease.

Unfortunately, up to now, neither the cause nor any specific cure for this disorder has been discovered. It is important, therefore, that the condition be diagnosed early and such measures as are available used to ward off heart damage.

Parents should understand that rest in bed is the most important part of the treatment. If the heart damage is at all extensive, the patient should not be allowed out of bed for any reason, and it may even be necessary for him to be fed. The patient's head should be raised by pillows so that he is comfortable.

In the beginning, the patient's diet should consist mainly of milk and custards. Bread and butter may also be given to patients who can take them. As soon as the patient's condition permits, a well-balanced diet with no restrictions should be used.

For the pain in the joints and the fever, salicylates are used in practically all instances. Such preparations as sodium salicylate may be given every four hours. Sodium bicarbonate, that is, baking soda, may be given along with the salicylates. The patient, of course, should receive plenty of fluids. If the salicylates cause ringing in the ears or vomiting, they may have to be stopped for a few days and then started again in smaller doses.

As a general rule, the pains in the joints are relieved within two days with this treatment. It is sometimes suggested that the affected joints be wrapped in light bandages.

Insofar as rest in bed is concerned, it should be continued for about four weeks after all active signs of the condition have cleared up. In the usual case, this means a period of at least three months in bed from the beginning of the disease.

The best signs of the clearing up of the active condition is the return to normal of the temperature and pulse rate, disappearance of the anemia, with a normal number of white cells in the blood, and a normal blood sedimentation rate. The latter means the rate at which the blood cells settle out of the fluid part of the blood. Infections cause changes in the blood sedimentation rate.

Once the condition has cleared up, the child should be allowed to return to normal activities gradually and, in a few weeks, should be allowed up for a time each day and permitted to walk about. During the period of recovery he should be closely watched by the physician to make sure that the condition does not recur.

Questions and Answers

M. M.: What would be the cause for and what can be done for pus in the urine?

Answer: This condition may develop from an infection of the bladder or kidneys, or of the prostate gland in the male.

The treatment will depend upon the location and the type of germ producing the trouble. Streptomycin, penicillin, sulfonamide drugs, and mandelic acid are all useful in the treatment of certain types of kidney and bladder infection.

Galion Stores Close Evenings in Gas Cut

Special to The Star

GALION—Because of the necessity of conservation of dwindling supplies of fuel gas, some 14 business places in Galion which are usually open in the evening, were asked to close at 8 p. m. Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week. The request was made by C. L. Baxter, manager of the Ohio Fuel Gas Company office here. Pressure in the line supplying Galion dropped to 57 pounds Thursday from Wednesday's 75 pounds. Normal is 160 pounds.

While the situation in Galion is not critical, it has looked as if it might become serious as a few outages were reported as pressure dropped.

Meanwhile, the Seventh Day Adventist church has announced no weekend services because of the gas shortage.

FILES DAMAGE SUIT

BUCYRUS—Damages totaling $20,232.53 for personal and property injury are asked in a court action filed in common pleas court Wednesday by Frank Williams of near Crestline against C. J. Price of LaPorte, Ind. Williams sets forth in the petition that he received permanent personal injury when the motorcycle on which he was riding was struck by a car operated by the defendant at the route 30-N intersection in Crestline.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 30—George H. Bender of Cleveland filed petitions with the secretary of state today for renomination by the Republicans as Ohio's representative-at-large.

TRUMAN PLACES GOP IN WET-DRY WRINGER

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—President Truman's demand for control of grain used by distillers put congressional Republicans on a political hot spot today.

Some GOP members admitted privately Mr. Truman had used their own anti-inflation law to maneuver them into a squeeze between the drys and the wets.

Their plight is this:

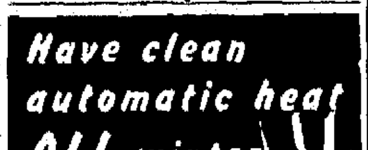

Kentucky, thick with distilleries, is a doubtful state in this year's presidential election. The west—Kansas, for instance—has a lot of drys who don't think grain ought to go into whisky at any time.

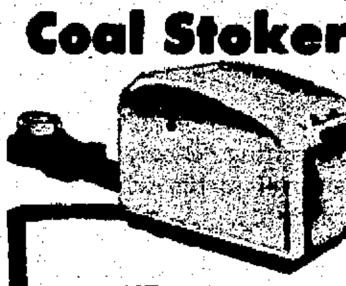

The anti-inflation law passed at the 1947 special session gave the President power to parcel out grain for distilling until Jan. 31—tomorrow.

The senate voted to extend this power to Feb. 29. But the house banking committee killed that bill Monday.

Under the anti-inflation law the distillers could still get together with the agriculture department and agree to cut down on their use of grain. They could agree how to split up what they do use.

But President Truman told congress yesterday this provision of the GOP law has flopped. The distillers haven't been able to agree, he said. Hence he asked congress to extend his grain rationing authority until Oct. 31.

Everyone Wants Lower Taxes But—

REPUBLICANS in congress want lower taxes. So do Democrats. So do their constituents back home. And because this is an election year, taxes probably will be lowered.

But there's a catch in it. Taxes probably will be cut because it's an election year, not because there's any justification for cutting them on a basis of corresponding cuts in federal costs.

While one Republican in the house of representatives was orating about tax-cutting Thursday—"preserving the American system," he called it—another one was agitating for higher allowances for veterans, which also is good election-year politics.

This was a typical political performance. Congress as a whole is more concerned about soft-soaping the people with promises of more spending and less taxing than it is about getting tough with the billionitis that has been an epidemic in Washington so long it has become a way of life.

Americans who try to see further than the something-for-nothing carrot that politicians dangle in front of their noses wants three things in this order:

1. They want a drastic cut in federal spending.
2. They want a substantial reduction of the national debt.
3. They want lower income taxes.

When there have been honest and successful attempts to cut federal spending, congressmen who talk about cutting taxes will cease to sound and behave like hypocrites. They have the cart before the horse, which may be an elegant way to wheedle votes but a traitorous way to run a government.

A Blast at the Admirals

HENRY L. Stimson, former secretary of war, sends a broadside at the Navy in excerpts from his autobiography in the Ladies Home Journal.

While admitting that the Army also has its share of pettiness and jealousy, he particularly criticizes "the peculiar psychology of the Navy department, which frequently seemed to retire from the realm of logic into a dim religious world in which Neptune was god, Mahan was his prophet and the United States Navy the only true church." Stimson says the traditional mutual distrust of the two services had a seriously destructive effect in wartime.

A former Navy secretary could, if he wished, make out a similar case against the Army, for service rivalries, prejudices and associations shape the thinking of career wearers of brass and braid, one of the points made by those who are alarmed at the number of military men in high government positions.

France Admits It

TOUGH measures taken and proposed for getting French money on a foundation of reality are a grim detail of war's tragedy.

Everything in war is waste. First comes wanton destruction of life and property. Then come the economic upheavals of desperate attempts to conceal how much was destroyed. Cheap money is one of the upheavals. Finally, when chaos has been reduced to some kind of order, the victims of war take account of their poverty and try to rebuild themselves.

France went through the wringer during and after World War I. Now it is going through again. The wealth of its people had been wasted. The government's decision to let the franc find its true value at a fraction of its former artificial value is unavoidable. Chaos is going to be reduced to some kind of order, if the government can manage it. Otherwise there will be more chaos.

Britain is not ready yet to admit that its pound sterling also must be devalued. Both the pound and the franc have been overpriced in relation to dollars, which also are shrinking in value as the United States absorbs its share of war's improvement. The French admit their plight. The British are being forced to admit it by degrees. But in the United States there still is the monstrous illusion that cheap money represents wealth, high wages and prosperity.

He'll Have That Balcony

OVER the protests of the fine arts commission and the esthetic senses of some citizens, workmen are losing no time putting up that White House balcony for President Truman. He can't be overruled. He or a successor couldn't be stopped if they chose to bedizen the White House with purple cupolas or neon-lighted watch towers.

Altering the White House's appearance shouldn't be within the province of any one man's whim. It is a national landmark and its tenants are temporary. Conceivably some of them may have atrocious architectural taste. The White House should be made a national monument and brought within the purview of the fine arts commission, a board which now prevents presidential whims from altering the appearance of our currency and our national shrines.

Egypt is about as large as California, Arizona and New Mexico combined, but the population is largely confined to the narrow Nile Valley.

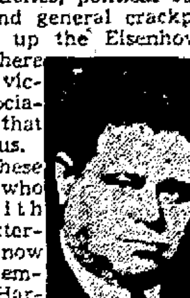

Scanning the Record

By George E. Sokolsky

Eisenhower's Withdrawal Leaves Only Taft, Dewey.

THE Republican party suffers the misfortunes that are usually associated with a party long out of power. Leadership is diverse and anyone can, with complete irresponsibility, articulate himself as something that he is not.

General Eisenhower's withdrawal cleared the decks of an enveloping fog. Eisenhower must have been astonished at the curious support that barnacled his ship. It could create a stir, but there were no delegates at the convention in those ex-New Dealers, ex-Willkieites, political somersaulters, and general crackpots who headed up the Eisenhower boom. And there could be no victory in association with that political circus.

SOKOLSKY

Some of these individuals, who flip-flop with amazing dexterity, have now associated themselves with Harold Stassen's Herculean efforts to become a candidate, win or lose, at any cost. And Stassen, immediately upon the demise of the Eisenhower boom, decided to invade Ohio with the object of getting four or five delegates in that state. The idea is two fold. 1. To keep himself before the nation as a candidate at no matter what cost; 2. To indicate that he is a candidate for the presidency and not the vice presidency. He has mistaken Taft's sportsmanship and generosity for weakness. He has taken pokes at Dewey, too, but dares not come into New York because he says the primary law is not so favorable. He dares not file for the Republican primaries in New York because obviously he cannot get even four or three delegates in this state.

Anyhow, Stassen will probably be cleared off the decks by the time the convention comes because he is a political liability to his party now. He is playing strictly a personal game, without assuming party responsibility. He could have remained governor of Minnesota; he could have run for the United States senate and he probably would have been elected. Instead, he played heroics and organized a four-years' campaign to get the presidential nomination. His latest maneuver, that is, the one before he filed in Ohio was to see what votes he could get if Dewey and Taft locked horns at the convention. He discovered, of course, that the favorites in such a contingency are Joe Martin or Senator Vandenberg. Stassen may ultimately become secretary of commerce. The man has ability and presence but suffers the dread disease of uncurbed personal ambition and is lacking in party esprit.

Taft or Dewey

The real contest is between Taft and Dewey and that is as it should be. Dewey was the Republican party's last candidate. He made a good showing and probably would have been elected had he not chosen to take the war out of the election. The choice was his to make; had he pursued the other course, of telling all, it would have told us in 1944 what is being disclosed now. At the request of General Marshall, he avoided discussion of the war and was defeated. He and his partisans feel that he is entitled to another chance.

Senator Taft is the leader of his party in congress and the intellectual guide of most of its adherents. No matter who is nominated, he will have to run on the record of his party in congress, and every line of that record is associated with Taft. No Republican candidate has a chance who will repudiate an iota of the Taft record. Such repudiation would only strengthen Truman; it would give him victory. Therefore, many Republicans feel that Taft had better run on his own record. They feel that he is likely to be victorious.

At any rate, that is how it stands: Dewey or Taft. These two are so evenly divided as to delegates that some anticipate that they will produce a deadlock. That leads to speculation as to what would happen if the fifth ballot is reached and the deadlock is unbroken. In that case, the two candidates might meet and decide on a plan to save the party from dissension, or they may free the delegates pledged to them. Should such a deadlock persist to the fifth ballot, it is likely that Joe Martin or Arthur Vandenberg, more likely Martin, will be the choice.

But as it stands, it is either Taft or Dewey.

What'll It Be—
A Shave Or A Shot?

A Connecticut bar has installed electric razors to provide free shaves for customers.

This allows citizens simultaneously to get rid of their afternoon thirst and 5-o'clock shadow.

Are free shaves to take the place of free lunch?

The only thing cut in most bars is the Scotch.

Of course, customers will have to exercise caution. Otherwise, after the third drink, they're liable to shave the wrong man.

It's an interesting development. But I still anticipate trouble between the bartenders' union and the barbers' local.

The Woes of Growing Up

By Harry A. McCrea

OHIO STATE university sociologists and the state Public Welfare Department report that a study of 1,200 Ohio children shows farm children are more self-reliant and happier than those in cities. The survey also shows that farm children have a greater sense of personal worth, or "belonigng," and that they get on better with others.

For those who ponder the problem, "Whither America?" this is a straw in a rising wind that is blowing from a horizon dark with storm clouds. Psychoneurotic is a word that has come into general use only in the last two decades. Now that sinister term may be applied to as many as one-fifth of the population.

Psychological research has revised Shakespeare's Seven Ages of Man into a pattern that matches the evolution of the species: First, there is the infant, relying only on animal instincts; then the small child with the savage's fears, cruelties and ingenuousness; then the older child occupied with fiercely competitive sport, tribal protocol and gang activity; then the adolescent, a medieval mystic, and finally the mature adult. That final stage is reached, however, only if all the other stages are fully and normally experienced. Otherwise the result is adult infantilism.

A city is a poor place for going through the stages of childhood. Engaging in the normal activities of childhood results in smashed windows, defaced lawns, broken boughs and a host of other minor depredations which are attributed to juvenile delinquency but are really nothing more than the results of giving vent to normal juvenile impulses.

A child should learn by doing. He should be exposed to dangers so that he can learn how to take care of himself. As it is, city children are so hedged about by counselors, advisers and watchmen that they have no self-reliance and crack up when finally they come face to face with danger.

In an article titled "Safe and Insane" in the January Atlantic, Philip Wylie comes out in favor of the old-fashioned Fourth of July. He says there are no statistics to prove that those who are saved by the ban on fireworks aren't otherwise killed or maimed by their own incompetence. He says a normal childhood is normally dangerous and that only through the experience of dangers graduated to his age can a child grow up emotionally.

To those perturbed by the amazing number of psychoneurotic cases in World War II, to those who see in America's future great promise but have forebodings about that promise being realized, I commend Mr. Wylie's article. He covers more thoroughly a subject that can only be skimmed over here.

A new machine is out which can solve any problem. It may be the dark horse candidate for the nominataion.

We have had presidents said to be products of the machine . . . This year the machine may get into the act itself.

In its present state of development this mechanical marvel will answer a question like: "Where was the moon 100 years ago?" As soon as it can answer a question like: "Where are we today?" politicians will be on the way out.

Science continues to take enormous strides . . . Another new discovery is that when a girl is disappointed in love her hair gets sick.

This would indicate that when a girl says: "I can't do a thing with my hair," what she really means is her heart.

But it does explain all the baldheaded men. And they had better not tell their wives, "my hair was fine till I met you."

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Sunday, Jan. 30, 1938.

Twelve residents of St. Joseph's Home for the Aged at Conshohocken, Pa. were rescued from a fire which destroyed the 100-year-old structure by 10 nuns who "acted like veteran firemen," the assistant fire chief stated.

Miss Una Bishman and Thomas Minard Jr. were married in the First Presbyterian church by Rev. Howard L. Olewiler.

The silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Williams of the Walters road was celebrated with a surprise party given by a group of their friends.

In the class were Mrs. Helen Mae Stamer, Mrs. Jennie Lee Reid, Margaret Jane Watkins, Ruth Helen McAdoo, Dorothy Mae McAdow, Joan Marie Lockwood, Ann Mapes and John Necomb Schaffner.

Miss Ada Hawkins, instructor of science, and Miss Margaret Helen Gast, an instructor in nursing practice in the Jewish hospital school of nursing at Cincinnatai, were visiting Miss Gast's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Gast of Pearl street.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Monday, Jan. 30, 1928.

Fears that the farmers of the United States were in danger of retrograding into mere peasants was expressed by Prof. W. E. Dodd of the University of Chicago on the opening day of a five-day program of the 16th annual farmers' week at Ohio State university.

About 200 persons attended a social and card party at the Junior Order hall, given by the Boosters club of Lime City Council No. 206, Jr. O. U. A. M. and Paramount and Mary A. Canfield Councils, Miss Grace Kline, student at Western College for Women, Oxford, returned to her studies after spending the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Kline of Thew avenue.

Howard Crissinger was installed as president of the Marion local Journeyman Barbers International Union of America. Daughters of America.

As a courtesy to their president, Mrs. J. W. Jolley, members of the Advance club entertained presidents of literary and music clubs of the city at an afternoon of modern plays and tea at the home of Mrs. E. H. Morgan on South Greenwood street.

Devaluation Necessary

By Raymond Moley

Devaluation Necessary—No. 7 ..7

THE French government's decision to devalue the franc is a step in the right direction, regardless of the objection of the International Monetary Fund. It would seem, in fact, that the fund has been utterly unrealistic in its attitude toward European governments' efforts to bring the official value of their currencies in line with the real value.

When the fund began to operate a year and a half ago, it sought to convey the impression that it had brought about stabilization of all currencies in non-Soviet Europe. On paper, they all had a fixed relationship with the American dollar and the American price of gold. It was ruled that any country that wanted to change this fixed rate by more than 10 per cent would have to apply to the board of the fund for permission. In the present case, the French government is proceeding to change its rate of exchange despite a veto by the fund.

MOLEY

The real fact is that the domestic value of money in France, Holland, Italy and even England has been far from stabilized. The official rates is at one figure; the real rate insisted upon by hotels, restaurants, stores and farmers is quite another thing. The international effect of this situation is important. It means, for instance, that the farmer who is asked to sell his products at the the official rate simply withholds his stuff from the market. He plants less and feeds his grain to his animals. These animals, in turn, he sells in the black market. That means that the United States must make up for the food which is not transported from farms to the cities through regular channels.

At the same time, a manufacturer must pay more and more to get labor and materials. Then, when he produces goods for export, the official rate is imposed upon him and he can sell in the export trade to the United States only at a price disastrous to himself.

Consequently, the producers in a country like France cannot sell in the United States, cannot get dollars and must be helped by some aspect of the Marshall plan. This situation is defeating the very thing we are attempting to meet in the Marshall plan. Herbert Hoover has repeatedly pointed this out and has recommended that stabilization must come from within the countries themselves.

Far from trying to prevent countries from devaluing their currencies, as seems to be the objective of the fund, it should be made a condition of ERP to bring their official rates of exchange into line with the real rates to stop inflation, to increase production and to improve the deliveries of food from farms to cities.

French devalution is a step in that proper direction.

War on Prejudice

In its latest troop information bulletin, the army opens an attack on prejudice, particularly against such minority groups as Jews, Negroes, Catholics and foreign-born.

Armed Forces Talk No. 210 informs the soldier that prejudice is based on ignorance, that intolerance threatens national unity and endangers our position of world leadership. The pamphlet continues: "No nation in history has ever offered more hope of the final realization of the ultimate ideal of freedom and equality than ours. In no other nation have so many people come closer to this ideal than in America."

"More and more Americans," says the army, "are becoming convinced that every person, regardless of his race, religion or national origin, should be judged on the basis of his own merit. Many are learning that democracy cannot be made to work for some unless it works for all." The pamphlet says any nation loses by discrimination that keeps some minority groups in ignorance and doesn't raise their living standards.

Wages Are Costs

A trade magazine in meat retailing, "Meat Merchandising," takes issue in its November number with the principle of consumer cooperatives sponsored by labor unions.

"The inconsistency of labor in making this move would be laughable were it not for the potential threat in this to the small businessman," the magazine says. "The unions want high wages for their members but recoil in amazement when high prices follow their granied increases. They expect meat dealers and grocers to give employment to their members at wages which increase each year; they expect these members to take their larger and larger pay checks and spend them with this new competitor of their employer. They shout 'scab' at workers who are willing to work for less than scale in any other employment, but in some of these new stores they are using volunteer, free help as a means of keeping down expenses. In using volunteer help they at least recognize something they've neved admitted before—that wages are a part of selling costs and that lower labor costs can result in lower prices."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

How the Twitchells Named the Walking Man

"Well, when does the flat car draw up w[ith] that $10,000 in prizes?" asked Elmer Tw[itchell]. "The Walking Man of that Ralph Edwards [radio] mystery is Gene Tunney or I am the skid[ded] halibut."

"Don't forget, I guess that the cue line '[of]ten but only one can tell' referred to a knock[out] punch and the 'bing-bong bell' was the gon[g]" insisted Mrs. Twitchell.

PHILLIPS

"Anybody could have seen that one," said Elmer. "It was the line 'The master of the metropolis fits his name quite well' that took real brainwork. And who doped it out to be the Kingfish? Furthermore, who looked up the definition of 'tunny' and saw it meant that Kingfish was a member of the tunny family and that the biggest member was known as 'The Great Tunny'?"

"I don't remember you saying that," insisted his wife.

"Woman," declared Elmer, "leave us be f[air] to each other! That heavyweight idea came o[ut] of my own head and it sealed the whole thi[ng] up Gene Tunney, former stevedore and e[x-] heavyweight champion, in whose life the cou[nt] of ten played such a stirring part and to wh[om] the bing bong of the bell was sweet music mo[re] than once on his climb to the top! There is [no] limit to my powers of perception where a ja[ck]pot is concerned. I need that Cadillac!"

"Lissen, at one time you were trying to li[ne] up all the cues with Jack Benny on the theo[ry the] bing-bong bell was not Big Ben," sneered t[he] wife. "I want half the prizes."

"Just like a woman," scoffed Twitchell. "Wh[y] my sweet, up to the last minute you were i[n]sisting that the footsteps that came out of t[he] mike were those of a man wearing skiis [or] deepsea diving shoes. It was your little Elm[er] who came up with the obvious conclusion th[at] the footfalls were those of a man bearing [a] heavy weight, perhaps at the trade of stev[e]dore."

"I put you on the right path," insisted M[rs.] Twitchell. "You were fiddling with the idea [it] was everybody from Bull Halsey and the Whi[te] House to Harpo Marx."

"Nerts," snapped Elmer. "You kept saying [it] couldn't be Tunney on account of where did t[he] added cue of the neighing horse come in. Yo[u] kept insisting it must be a radio cowboy or som[e] star in the movie Westerns. We were stuck wi[th] the horse cue until I got out the dictionary aga[in] and saw the words 'On the Atlantic seaboard th[e] largest tunny are called horse mackerel'."

"So all you gotta do is send in a donation [to] the American Heart Association, with you[r] phone number, and get called on the phone [if] somebody among the other five million don't g[et] called first!" said the wife.

"Have confidence!" urged Elmer. "I feel luc[k] is with us!"

"Even after the last two broadcasts, when o[ut] of six numbers called three were in Lo[s] Angeles!" snapped the wife.

"They wouldn't dare phone another Lo[s] Angeles number," insisted Elmer. "That narrow[s] it down to about 8,000 cities, including our own."

"You're an optimist," insisted Mrs. Twitchell.

"Dumb" Animals

By TRUMAN TWILL

Back on the subject of dogs again, where di[d] anyone ever get the idea they are "dumb" animals—meaning with no ability to speak?

They are the most articulate creatures tha[t] ever sold the human race on the propositio[n] they are worth the trouble they cause. In thi[s] respect, they have done better than brush sales[]men.

Certainly it can't be claimed dogs suffer fro[m] any lack of ability to carry on conversation with each other, as anyone knows who has hear[d] them talking things over at long distance in th[e] middle of the night.

Far from being without ability to speak, mu[tts] have developed it to the point where a ne[w] breed of dog that didn't yammer it's head o[ff] 24 hours a day would go like hot cakes in th[e] American dog market.

These loquacious beasts have a word fo[r] everything. All they need is an interpreter, [to] make their babel comprehensible to the dum[b] humans who must listen to their gibble-gabb[le] until their ears are tired.

When dogs are comfy inside and want to [be] stuffed, they say so in a few well chosen word[s] freely interpreted as "Shake a leg, let's have it now." Nothing inarticulate about that.

On the frequent occasions when they wa[nt] to go strolling and see what the other dogs hav[e] been doing in their absence, they get over the[ir] message in a way that would do credit to a[n] advertising agency. They say, "There's no tim[e] to waste"—in pear-shaped tones audible tw[o] blocks away.

If they are dissatisfied with the way thing[s] are giong, they get over the idea with a broad[]side of sulphurous invective which plain[ly] means, "Well I'll be * * * I give the best year[s] of my life to these dopes and this is the thank[s] I get."

Their long suit is wheedling. They save it fo[r] special occasions, such as asking to be release[d] from confined quarters when their feet are we[t,] begging for extra rations, candy, the privile[ge] of sitting in the easy chair, and having the[ir] ears scratched.

Besides these standard speeches, they al[so] spend most of their waking hours grumblin[g,] making wise cracks, inviting other dogs to com[e] hither, intimidating gas meter readers, warnin[g] against the approach of wholly imaginar[y] burglars, singing to themselves and exchangin[g] chit-chat. One way and another, they are th[e] most garrulous collection of loafers to be foun[d] on earth, with something to say about ever[y]thing and no compunctions about saying it.

If they're "dumb" animals, Jimmy Durant[e] is a mute.

In Loving Memory Of

★Our dear wife and mother, Mrs. Maggie LaRue, who passed away Jan. 30, 1946.

There is no death! the stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore,
And bright in heaven's jeweled crown
They shine forever more.
They have but dropped their robe of clay
To put their shining raiment on;
They have not wandered far away—
They are not "lost" or "gone."
Though disenthralled and glorified,
They still are here and love us yet;
The dear ones they have left behind
They never can forget.

PILES ARE NEVER "MILD"
DANGER IN NEGLECT

No one should ever think of piles (hemorrhoids) as a "mild" disorder.
Although they may seem a "mild" ailment, especially when not giving pain or inconvenience, piles are in fact tumor formations without tendency to heal themselves; instead, they are likely, if neglected to keep increasing in size, involving more and more of the rectal area.
Even a so-called "mild" case may be expected to undermine one's health, by inviting, predisposing to or aggravating other ailments, such as: indigestion, biliousness, stomach trouble, constipation, headaches pain in back and down the legs, secondary anemia with its rundown tired feeling and general nervous irritability.
Removal of piles is the only permanent relief — written guarantee. My method produces little or no discomfort, does not require the use of knife or drugs, and seldom is the patient required to lose any time from work or other duties.
Why not call and learn of this method? The examination is free. No Appointment Needed.

Russia To Expand Piece-Rate System

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, Jan. 30—Wider application of the piece-rate and bonus systems are to be given special attention in the thousands of trade union contracts which will be signed in the Soviet Union during January, February and March.

The all union central council of trade unions—which has just concluded a session here—also instructed trade union organizations to devote special attention to drawing up these agreements in connection with wages and the setting up of production quotas.

"The main object of the new agreements," said a labor reporter writing about the proposals, "is to achieve on the basis of higher productivity of labor a rate of increase in output that would insure the fulfillment of the five-year plan in four years and thereby secure the further improvement of the working people's standard of living."

D PSYCHOLOGIST EAKS TO KIWANIS

r Says Naughty Children Should Be Studied.

Horace Newberger of Co-, executive psychologist of the Bureau of Juvenile Re- discussed "Problems of People" when he spoke be- e Kiwanis club in its week- oon meeting Thursday at Harding.

dealing with young people obey the rules of law by stealing or performing other neanors, Dr. Newberger he disturbances within the ould be studied rather than attacked. So often, he said, parents and other persons working with children do not study the reasons back of a child's unlawful actions.

Dr. Newberger gave a number of reasons why children may steal and then explained in detail why boys and girls become insolent with their parents. He gave a report on a study made a short time ago in Seneca county to find and classify the types of disturbances in children rather than the things done. After the classifications were made, Dr. Newberger said, they then began to study the various cases.

The plan of studying the disturbances of the child rather than the symptoms is comparatively new, said Dr. Newberger, and is being used a great deal at the present time.

An announcement was made that 30 Kiwanians and wives plan to attend the charter night party Tuesday night at Bucyrus of a new Kiwanis club recently organized there. The meeting of the board of directors and committee chairman will be held Wednesday evening at Greenwood Inn instead of the regular night of Tuesday.

Guests at the meeting were Probate Judge Edward J. Ruzzo, Ralph S. Barger and Edward Steele of Marion, Charles M. Lucas of Columbus, A. E. Simmons of Ft. Wayne, Ind., and W. A. Seaman of Columbus.

WORLD PRAYER DAY PLANNED BY COUNCIL

County Church Women Set Observance for Feb. 13.

Plans for World Day of Prayer Feb. 13 were made at a meeting of the Marion County Council of Church Women Thursday afternoon at Prospect Street Methodist church. Mrs. Leo Keller presided and 27 members were present representing 14 churches. Assignments for various parts of the program were made.

It was announced the prayer observance will be held in Calvary Evangelical United Brethren church and the time will be 2 p. m. The theme will be the Lord's prayer, and the program will include with periods of prayer speaking parts and appropriate music. Mrs. Keller expressed her feeling that this would be particularly impressive and inspirational service in consideration the fact that assemblies all over the world will be praying the same prayer and participating in the same meditations at corresponding times.

A review was given of progress of the "milk bottle" project of the organization, adopted at the last meeting. Each cooperating church has placed an ordinary milk bottle where contributions may be made, with the slogan of the project, "Quarters for Quarts," brought to the attention of the congregations. It is stated that 25 cents will buy two quarts of powdered milk to be sent to children of Europe where ordinarily only a gallon of thin milk a month per child is available. A request was made that affiliated organizations turn into the interdenominational council 1948 dues.

Elks Make Plans For Jubilee Class

Final plans were made for the golden jubilee class to be initiated next Thursday night, at a meeting of Marion Lodge of Elks, last night. At that time also the lodge will observe past exalted rulers' night and there will be a dinner at 6:30. Several candidates were balloted on.

It was voted to purchase 50 tickets for the indoor circus to be sponsored by the Marion Industrial Union council Feb. 6 at the Armory and turn them over to the children of the County children's home.

Another social meeting was planned for Saturday night when Glenn Johnson and his orchestra will play for dancing and refreshments will be served.

White families in the United States tend to expend a larger proportion of their incomes on food than do Negro families.

WALTER JOHANNES DAMROSCH, born Jan. 30, 1862, is credited with many innovations which have become musical commonplaces. Son of a conductor and an opera singer in Germany, he came to the United States with his father in 1871. On his father's death, young Damrosch took over much of his work. He helped develop both the New York orchestra and the Metropolitan Opera.

THE MAHATMA chats with the new Governor General of the Dominion of India, Lord Louis Mountbatten, in 1947. The woman is unidentified.

INDEPENDENCE was drawing near in 1946 when Gandhi toured Bengal Province to view the scenes where riots had cost thousands of lives.

Gandhi Is Slain by Assassin

had almost lost all desire to live longer because "what is the use of living when hatred and killing have marred the atmosphere?"

Yet the world saw the unpretentious figure, clad in white loin cloth, shawl and sandals, as that of one of the great men of his time. No mogul or emperor ever had more power in India than Gandhi, who, without rank or post, played on the heart-strings of a people to win their leadership. In prison or out he was the country's most potent figure for more than a quarter century.

Had Detractors, Too

His fellow Hindus regarded him as a saint on earth. He once had to act swiftly and strongly to stop a section of them from adding his image to their long list of gods and worshipping idols.

But he was not without detractors. In 1942 Gandhi was denounced as an "arch saboteur" by L. S. Amery, British secretary of state for India, because of his civil disobedience campaign launched while Japanese invasion forces stood at the threshold in Burma during World War II. Winston Churchill strongly opposed independence for India, forecasting "blood and misery."

India was divided into an independent Moslem dominion (Pakistan) and a Hindu dominion (India). Earl Mountbatten, governor-general of the latter, referred to Gandhi as the "architect" of Indian freedom. Padit Jawaharlal Nehru, a Gandhi disciple who became prime minister of the Dominion of India, praised him as the "great soul who launched the freedom movement and guided us through the dark period of our struggle."

At a time when he had hoped to enjoy the fruits of his freedom victory he trudged through tropical countrysides in Bengal, Noakhali, Bihar, and elsewhere, his cracked feet staining his sandals with blood as he preached his gospel of truth and love, and comforted the victims of the riots.

Spent 12 Years in Prisons

He saw the bodies of men, women and children cruelly slain in those places and in New Delhi. No matter what the world thought of his work, the evidence of violence convinced Gandhi that he had failed in striving for a goal he considered even greater than attainment of freedom—the teaching his legions of followers to love their enemies as they did their friends.

Until the early days of freedom he had influence almost like that of an orchestra leader, firing the people's nationalist spirit or calming them by his call alone. After freedom he once commented that "the time was when whatever I said the Indian masses followed but today mine is a lone voice."

Gandhi stepped into the world's consciousness from the background of a promising practice as a London-educated young lawyer.

When he returned to India in 1915 he ranked alongside C. R. Das in the India nationalist movement and upon Das' death in 1925 became the recognized leader of the nationalists.

In India he led crusades against conditions which he considered oppressive, but he was loyal to the British crown until Viceroy Lord Linlithgow in September, 1939, declared India at war with the Axis without consulting any Indian legislative body.

Promoted Disobedience

Gandhi's reply was a war-time civil disobedience campaign with independence as its objective. He had halted prior civil disobedience campaigns when his people broke away from his teachings of non-violence, but this time he allowed it to run its course, and it was a course marked by bloodshed.

In July of 1942 Gandhi demanded that Britain hand over the government of India to the Indians and then withdraw. The British regarded his political activity as hampering India's resistance to Japan. He was arrested in August when the All-India Congress adopted a resolution advocating civil disobedience and Indian independence, but instead of being placed in jail the little leader was held in the Aga Khan's ornate palace at Poona. It was the sixth time he had been imprisoned.

"I always get the best bargains from behind prison bars," he once said.

His hunger strikes often brought about compromises, for the British feared public reaction in event of his death through fasting.

He was interned in the palace for 21 months and then released. His failing health was given as the reason.

Long Hunger Strike

During that period he went on a 21-day hunger strike in protest against "the leonine violence" which he accused the government of using to suppress the civil disobedience campaign, and against the policy of locking up members of the All-India Congress party. On only two of his eight previous fasts since 1918 had he gone that long without food.

Lord Linlithgow tried to dissuade Gandhi from his fast at Poona because of his poor health. He characterized it as "political blackmail for which there can be no moral justification."

When Gandhi was released from internment he wanted to know what the war situation was. Medical advisers tried to persuade him to rest, but the emaciated little man remonstrated: "Let me know what is going on around me. If I am to die, let me not die an ignorant man."

Death of His Wife

His fasts were for various causes — for penance, for protest, for attempts to bring about reforms. Two were announced at the start as being "unto death." In 1947 he fasted for three days to protest the Hindu-Moslem strife in Calcutta. That was his tenth fast. He told communal leaders that the one responsible for the next "untoward" incident "must be the first to jump into the fire" and that his own next fast would be "unto death."

During his confinement in the Aga Kahn's palace, his wife of 61 years died. She had been in internment with him. Gandhi so overshadowed his wife that she was called "the woman nobody knows."

They were married when both were 13 under what the Indian leader once described as "the cruel system of child marriage." By the time she was 18 she had borne three children. After the birth of their fourth son their relationship, at Gandhi's suggestion, became as brother and sister.

Gandhi was born Oct. 2, 1869, at Porbander and was reared in an anti-British atmosphere. His father, who had been premier of several small native states, once went to jail rather than apologize to a British commissioner he had taken to task in public.

CHARGES U.S. BREAKS PEACE

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Jan. 30—The Moscow radio said today Russia had formally charged the United States with violating the Italian peace treaty by sending U. S. warships to Italian ports.

The broadcast said Alexander S. Punyushkin, the Soviet ambassador in Washington, had sent a protest note to Secretary of State George C. Marshall Wednesday.

The radio said the Soviets also sent the note to the French government "with a request to make its contents known to the Allied and associated powers which had signed the peace treaty with Italy."

It was the second such protest this week. Yesterday Russia complained to the U. S. and Britain over the proposed reopening of Mellaha air base in North Africa. This protest also charged violation of the Italian treaty.

EFFORT MADE TO SAVE TRUMAN TAX

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—Democrats hatched a plan today to use the GOP tax cut bill as the model for a substitute containing a $3,200,000,000 corporation tax.

As a way to save a part of President Truman's own tax program, it looked like a forlorn hope.

The great election year debate entered its second day with Republicans confident their bill, with its $6,500,000,000 in tax reductions, will pass unchanged on Monday. The Republican bill does not provide any new taxes.

The Democratic leadership had just about given up any idea of putting the President's $40-a-head tax-cutting proposal before the house. Instead, the search was on for a compromise.

2 Killed, 2 Injured In Train Collision

By The Associated Press

COLDWATER, O., Jan. 30—Two trainmen were killed and two injured today in the collision of two freight trains on the Nickel Plate line, 5 miles west of this western Ohio community.

The dead were James N. Huff, a fireman, and John D. Meyers, a brakeman, both of Lima.

The injured, removed to a Celina hospital, are L. M. Goldman, engineer, and Lee Wicker, a brakeman, both of Lima.

First reports said one freight train was backing onto the Oakland siding when it was sideswiped from the rear by the other train.

Fire Destroys French Friendship Train Food

By The United Press

PARIS, Jan. 30 — Fire swept through a warehouse and destroyed 2,000 tons of food from the American friendship train today and the French government immediately opened an inquiry into suspected sabotage.

The food was destined for the Paris area. It was stored in a warehouse of the French welfare organization Entire' Aide Francais.

Officials said the food included sugar, milk and chocolate. Damage was estimated at more than 1,000,000,000 francs.

British Air Hero On Missing Plane

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Jan. 30—Sir Arthur Coningham, British air hero of World War II, is believed to have been lost with 28 other persons today aboard a British commercial plane enroute to Bermuda.

This afternoon the plane was eight hours overdue at the island outpost. British South American Airways said hopes for its safety looked black. The ship was a British-made Tudor IV.

Says Melting Snow Won't Cause Ohio River Flood

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, Jan. 30—Despite the heavy mantle of snow draped over the Ohio river's watershed from Pittsburgh to Cairo, headquarters of the Ohio river division corps of engineers here is giving little thought to the possibility of a major spring flood.

4 Feared Dead, 12 Hurt In Vermont Hotel Fire

By The Associated Press

ST. ALBANS, Vt., Jan. 30—Four persons were feared dead and at least 12 others were injured early today in a fire which swept the 136-year-old Jesse Welden Inn, causing damage estimated at more than $200,000.

Fire Chief R. H. Sweeney, who estimated damage, said four persons unaccounted for may have perished in the fire.

PROTESTS COLD BUSES

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 30 — Thirteen buses were prevented from making scheduled runs today when Thomas P. Meaney, president of the Cleveland Transit System Employe's union, said he found their heaters were not operating. Meaney previously had asserted he would not allow any streetcars not heated to 50 degrees to leave the St. Clair car barns.

discuss what plan of action can be taken here.

Mayor Dowler said he will ask for a committee to attend the proposed meeting which will be arranged if possible within the next week or two.

In the event that the city decides to go ahead with construction of a permanent addition to the Marion hospital, action this year is possible if the local plans are approved and the contract let by May 15, the deadline for federal aid for the 1947-48 fiscal year.

37 Applications Ready

Dr. Porterfield indicated yesterday that more than $2,500,000 in federal funds for the first of the five-year periods is still available. Thirty-seven communities already have prepared applications, he said, pointing out to Mayor Dowler that the balance of the federal funds for this period will be lost to Ohio unless application is made soon.

Dr. A. J. Borowsky, chief of the hospital program in the health department, said the program was expected to take care of the first two priority groups within the next two years. Marion, in the second priority group, would thus be in line for construction next year if the time element forestalls action before May 15.

The state priority system plans were forwarded today from Columbus to the U. S. surgeon general for approval, expected in the middle of March before the state can actually get its plans underway.

Priorities given communities in this area include Urbana, second priority, Delaware, Bucyrus, Findlay, Kenton, Mt. Vernon and Bellefontaine, third priority, Ashland, fourth, Lima, fifth.

SECOND PLANE FALLS IN HUNT FOR ANOTHER

By The Associated Press

FRANKFURT, Germany, Jan. 30 — U. S. Air Force headquarters reported today the sighting of plane wreckage in the lower French Alps, and said another plane, presumably a B-17 in the search party, had crashed 20 miles east of the wreckage.

The first plane was believed to be a DC-3 transport which disappeared Tuesday while enroute from France to Italy. It carried three American women and five children, dependents of U. S. soldiers in the Trieste area.

The wreckage of this twin-engined craft was sighted 12 miles northwest of Digne, France, the Air Force headquarters at Wiesbaden reported.

One of the pilots in the search party said he had seen the second plane crash and explode. It appeared to him to be a Flying Fortress (B-17).

Committee Reports On Ohio Oil Situation

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 30—The governor's oil advisory committee found no "critical" statewide shortage of furnace oil but urged "most rigid conservation" by home owners and building managers today.

In its report to Gov. Thomas J. Herbert, the 22-man committee added "in a few limited areas the situation is out of balance." These included Cincinnati, where the committee blamed the freezing of the Ohio river preventing barge-line deliveries.

One Injury Listed In Auto Accident Report

Accidents in Marion yesterday and this morning included injury to one person. Steven Orth of 327 South Main street was injured when struck by a car driven by Fred Berry of 242 North Grand avenue at 11:50 a. m. yesterday on Union street at Holmes Place. Mr. Orth was not seriously injured but fears that the condition resulting from a former injury may have been aggravated.

Richard Green of near Marion, driving a car owned by William Green, ran into a parked car owned by E. E. Smith of 221 Blaine avenue at St. James street and State street at 8:15 last night, when the cars skidded on the icy pavement.

In an accident occurring today a car driven by Joseph G. Hinebaugh of Route 2 Washington, Pa. and a taxi owned by the Red Cab Co. driven by Thomas Stevens of 266 Owens street, collided at the intersection of Columbia and Windsor streets at 9:51 a. m. Minor damage was reported.

SALES TAX VIOLATORS FINED

By The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, O., Jan. 30—Six clerks and business operators accused of failing to give sales tax receipts to customers were given suspended $25 fines today by a judge who declared a state drive against such violations had not been "given enough publicity." Municipal Judge Harry Snodgrass ordered the six, however, to pay court costs when they pleaded guilty on arraignment.

Memoirs of Cordell Hull

marked time. The press in London carried big headlines that Moley, "The man who controlled Presidents," was on his way to London to look after American interests there! The Paris press became highly wrought up and rawhided me in rough fashion, indicating that I had proved incapable of handling the situation for my government.

MOLEY'S RECEPTION in London was surpassed only by those given to kings. Delegations of high officials, newspapermen and others, their emotions roused, hurried down to Plymouth to meet him and vie with each other in paying him tribute. Upon reaching London he called at my office, shook hands, paid his respects and met the delegation. The press desiring to interview him, I accompanied him to the meeting but kept in the background while he appeared as the only person among the Americans whom they had the slightest interest in seeing. Thereafter I saw little of Moley until the explosion occurred. I decided to give him all the rope he might want and see how long he would last in that London situation.

Soon after his arrival, Moley sent word to me requesting that I convey to the delegation a message to the effect that be intended giving his attention to the currency stabilization question. He immediately launched into conversations with the chancellor of the exchequer, Neville Chamberlain, and Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, economic adviser of the British treasury. The first meeting was reported to have taken place at the American Embassy, where Moley was stopping.

During the few days that followed, prime ministers and other top officials of governments flocked after Moley as if he were the Pied Piper. I continued to keep in the background as if I were the most insignificant individual hanging about the conference.

PRIME MINISTER MacDONALD asked me, at one time: "Can you send Moley over to me? I'd like to talk to him." Then he added, as an afterthought, "And you can come to, if you like."

Some days later, MacDonald called me aside and spoke to me like a schoolmaster lecturing a pupil. "Do you know," he said, "that it is not customary to issue press statements at a conference like this?" (I had issued one or two.) "It just isn't done."

I retorted, "It's no more unusual than for the chief of another delegation to go over my head and follow after and confer directly with a subordinate of mine."

All in all, however, MacDonald was an admirable man, with fine ability, and fluency in speaking. In any group he would soon attract attention. He was an omnivorous reader and possessed a marvelous fund of general information, especially in relation to government.

Moley early discovered that some of the leading foreign delegates and some of the foreign press were saying freely that he had come to London not merely as a liaison person but as the representative of the President clothed with full powers which would supersede those of the delegation. While this sort of publicity which spread rapidly over Britain and the Continent was injurious to the delegation and especially myself, Moley, courted by prime ministers and other high dignitaries, appeared to act as if be were in entire charge for the United States government, notwithstanding he threw out transparent protests and denials as to his occupying such a status.

MOLEY NEGOTIATED an agreement to stabilize currencies, and cabled it to the President for his approval. So sanguine was he that the President would accept his ideas that he informed high officials of Britain and other governments that he would meet them at No. 10 Downing Street at a certain hour in the late afternoon of June 30. Soon he telephoned me at my hotel and very earnestly requested me to go down to No. 10 Downing Street to sign what he said was the forthcoming agreement. I quickly and bluntly declined to go and stated decisively that, as a delegate to the London conference, I had nothing to do with the stabilization question. He pleaded with me, but I choked off his further attempts at conversation.

There was obliged to be a showdown and end of this grotesque performance. It came with a telegram from the President rejecting Moley's proposed agreement. At that moment I was starting out for Cliveden. As I walked out to the head of the steps leading from the hotel, Moley rushed down to meet me and said. "There's a cable coming in from Washington and it is unfavorable on stabilization. We've just got to do something about it."

I then turned on him. I saw he had reached the end of his rope and was through. I proceeded to talk to him. I started in by saying: "You had better get back home. You had no business over here in the first place." I elaborated along those lines. I then walked to my car to spend the week-end in the country, which I had promised to do after many urgent invitations.

UPON MY RETURN to London, the President's famous "bombshell message" arrived which vigorously rejected Moley's stabilization proposal and spoke out to the conference in strong fashion. The President said be would regard it as "a catastrophe amounting to world tragedy" if the conference allowed itself to be diverted from its broader problems by the proposal of a purely artificial, temporary experiment affecting the monetary exchange of a few nations only. This was the message that threw the conference into an uproar.

A few hours after it arrived, Governor James M. Cox, vice chairman of our delegation, who I had arranged should see MacDonald every day, came rushing to my office. Very much wrought up, he said: "The British and other important countries are so aroused by the President's message that they have decided to call a meeting of the steering committee this afternoon, let it convene the conference in full session tomorrow, and then and there declare the conference adjourned indefinitely. In their resolution they will hang around the President's neck the sole responsibility for wrecking the conference."

I CONCENTRATED on an effort to checkmate this movement and to quiet the situation before it got out of hand.

I saw MacDonald. I most earnestly urged him to modify his attitude and say a few words in favor of continuing the conference in regular session. He very sharply stated he had no notion of doing so. He complained bitterly that the President's message, by shattering the conference, had destroyed his, MacDonald's, entire political position, which he had expected to be bolstered by a successful conference. I had received reports that in private conversation MacDonald had said he probably would now be obliged to resign as prime minister.

When the steering committee reconvened, the outlook was very little, if any more encouraging.

I sought and obtained the floor for some 20 minutes for an opening address. I rested my main position on the ground that 66 nations of the world had unanimously agreed on the absolute necessity for holding the conference and on its taking action to solve the numerous financial and economic problems imperatively calling for remedies unless the whole international structure was to collapse even more completely.

The delegates who followed alternated in their support of MacDonald or me. Prime Minister Bennett of Canada, Viscount Ishii of Japan and the Swedish delegate strongly supported my position. Neville Chamberlain, too, came out in my favor.

THE ARGUMENTS we marshalled in opposition to adjournment were sufficiently appealing to break down the plans of the British and French. The outcome was as sudden as it was surprising to me. Even Prime Minister MacDonald backed away from his original position and joined in harmony with the movement in the opposite direction. After two hours of argument, the meeting agreed that the conference should remain in session.

The three weeks that followed were a kind of paper chase during which we sought to find odds and ends of topics that could be discussed.

Moley departed for home after sending the President a telegram which was in the nature of a rigid inspection report on the delegation. He pronounced the entire delegation incapable of representing the President at the conference except Key Pittman, who, in fact, rendered about the least service apart from his resolution on silver in which few were interested. Moley naively sent the telegram in state department code and its contents became known to the American delegates, each of whom except Pittman resented it strongly.

THE NIGHT OF JULY 27 I sailed on the SS President Harding for home. Prior to leaving London I received a cable from the President: "Before you sail I want you to know once more of my effectionate regard for and confidence in you. You have admirably faced great difficulties and through your own courage and sincerity saved the principle of continued international discussion of perlexing world problems from a collapse which would have made further deliberations impossible. When you get to New York next week I shall be at Hyde Park and I much hope that you and Mrs. Hull will come there for the night when you arrive . . ."

It is due to the President that I should say that he then and always thereafter insisted strongly that he had had no thought of giving Moley any special powers, much less any authority over the United States delegation. He said he merely meant for Moley to drop over to London as a liaison man to take any information the delegation might be interested in securing, and to return to America within a few days with such information from the delegation as the President might be interested in. He told me that the great blare of trumpets and the dramatization that Moley either promoted or acquiesced in, or both, with an enthusiasm apparent to the public, surprised him greatly. The President gave Moley some outside work and within a few weeks transferred him from the state department.

I AM IN BAD STANDING now ...one household which has a ...all boy who wants to become an-...er Thomas Edison. This young mechanical genius asked me about heaven, and I did my best to explain to him all about this place where I hope some day to get my mail. I answered all his questions with the latest information I have.

But the other day his father reproached me bitterly:

"What ideas are you putting in my son's head anyway? He has informed his mother he never wants to go to heaven because it doesn't have an escalator. He says he would rather go to a department store."

The only deal with the younger generation I have come out ahead in recently concerns the purchase of a dog by two children of some friends in Indianapolis. The kids earned the money themselves. But I made a small contribution to the fund, and another friend later put in some, too.

THE KIDS BOUGHT A Dachshund. It was so long they decided it needed two names. So they named the front end "Hal" for me—and generously named the back half "Charley" in honor of the last contributor.

Now, about this freckle. I playfully pretended to pluck it off the nose of this five-year-old girl after a visit a month ago.

Last week I called again, and she crept up behind me and whispered in my ear:

"Please, I want my freckle back. I think it is lonesome for me."

"I am taking awfully good care of it," I replied.

"Do you take it out for a walk every day on a leash?" she asked.

Somewhat flabbergasted at the mental picture of a freckle out for a stroll, I hemmed and hawed and she said very solemnly:

"I really do want my freckle back. Please mail it to me this week, and don't forget."

What happens now? The only thing I can think of is to tell her the freckle changed into a chocolate bar and mail her one.

But this could start a game that would put me in the poorhouse. He has about 1,265,347 freckles now—and growing more every day the sun shines.

Love's Perilous Path

By ADELE GARRISON

I HAD the feeling that I was turning back the hands of the clock, as, with Winters leading the way, Mr. "K.", valued FBI aide of my father, Dicky and I, and our two blinded and hobbled prisoners went along through the sub-basement of my winding passages until we came to a huge door which Winters unlocked, locking it again when we had passed through it.

I knew we were in the sub-basement of another tall building, and that when we finished traversing it, we should be at the entrance to a street which the Lansfield did not touch.

Memories of other journeys through this strange subterranean thoroughfare crowded upon me, but I had no time to con them. All my faculties were bent upon the possible answers to the query as to my father's reason for these bizarre precautions. Then I gave up that speculation also. We would know all about it when we reached the Underwood home to which my father had summoned us, unless, indeed, he was indulging himself in one of his moods of secrecy when, as Dicky put it; "You couldn't get anything out of the Chief with a corkscrew."

When we came to a spot where we could see the entrance, but could not be seen by anyone outside the door, Winters halted.

"This is the place you wish sir," he told Mr. "K."

The FBI man gestured to Dicky and Winters to take over the man he was holding. When they had their hands on his prisoner, Mr. "K." went swiftly and noiselessly up the stairs.

We saw him pause at the door, and look quickly up and down the street, which we could not see. Then he passed beyond our vision, and it seemed endless hours, although it really was little over a minute, before he came swiftly back down the stairs again.

"Everything is all right," he said. "The two large cars"—I knew he meant the armored ones of my father's—"are just outside the entrance. Winters and I will take these two men up the stairs, and rush them into one car. Dicky, bring your wife up to the top of the stairs right behind us, and get into the other car. The door will be open for you—Joe is driving. There isn't a soul on the street—the Chief has taken care of that.

"I will escort these men to the place the Chief wishes them to go," he went on, "and Dicky, you will please take your wife to the home of your friends. Tell the Chief, who is waiting for you there that I will join you as soon as I have delivered my—express packages—safely. Mrs. Graham, you have that package safe."

"Yes," I answered, knowing that he meant the small bundle of exiled Queen Olga's note paper and envelopes with her royal crest stamped on them, and also the samples of her handwriting, including her signature, which my father had asked her to send to him.

"Please give it to the Chief immediately you arrive," he said. "I am sorry that this new development"—he gestured to our blindfolder prisoners—"has prevented me from giving you the explanation I promised. Tell the Chief, please, that I had no time to tell you anything. He will give you the explanation, I am sure. And now, let us get up these stairs as fast as the Lord will let us. The coast is still clear. Gus, who is emulating the boy on the burning deck, is standing at the door of the car I'm taking watching the street. Come on, Winters!"

He and Winters rushed our two prisoners up the stairs, and Dicky hurried me up, close behind them. When we reached the street, the men, and Mr. "K." were entering one car. Gus, at their heels, waited long enough to wave his hand at me before following them and closing the door. Then Dicky and I, with a greeting for Joe at the wheel of our car, went through the door which another man was holding open for us, and we seated ourselves at once, for we knew how quickly Joe could get a car in motion. His motor already was running, though we had not heard it until we were inside the car.

"The Underwood house?" Joe asked as he sent the big armored car in one direction, while the other car, starting before ours, had turned around and was going in the other direction.

"Yes," Dicky and I answered together.

"Okay. Hold on to your hats," Joe told us, and I knew from previous experience of his driving, as skillful as it was reckless, that his caution was justified.

UPPER SANDUSKY — A new report and schedule of assessments has been filed by the Wyandot county engineer on the Parker ditch in Marseilles township, petitioned for by J. W. Bear. A hearing has been set by the county commissioners for 10 a. m. Monday, Feb. 16.

Global Scene

By DeWitt Mackenzie

BRITAIN'S coal production not only is the most important item in her economic crisis but it is vital to the recovery of western Europe as a whole—facts which months ago impelled the harrassed government to set a goal of 200,000,000 tons a year as essential.

The need for coal is so great that Foreign Secretary Bevin some time back declared in effect (I haven't his exact words before me) that if he were given 20,000,000 tons for export he could change the whole European picture. Well, it looks as though Mr. Bevin might get his wish, and thereby hangs a remarkable story which has been brought to me by a party of British coal miners—horny handed union officials who have spent much of their lives digging in the dark caverns of the earth for coal.

MACKENZIE

Our account fits in with the moral and spiritual rehabilitation which I have reported in this column as showing itself in many parts of Europe. The widespread recognition of its need is what inspired Sir Stafford Cripps, minister of economic affairs and chancellor of the exchequer, to declare that there would be no regeneration of British industry unless the nation took "fresh drafts of Christian truth."

A couple of months or so ago a wave of moral rearmament swept into the pivotal coal pits of North Staffordshire and spread to neighboring coalfields. Since then the output of coal in this area has jumped something like forty-five per cent—and within 60 miles of North Staffordshire some 75 per cent of Britain's coal is produced. The position now is that if other coal fields should come up to the record of North Staffordshire, Britain not only would attain her goal of 200,000,000 tons but would have some 30,000,000 tons for export.

HOW HAS THIS HAPPENED? Well, of course the government's urgent appeal to the miners has spurred their effort, but the startling advance of production in the North Staffordshire area has come since moral re-armament hit the area in the shape of a play, "The Forgotten Factor"—a story of moral rehabilitation beginning in the home and echoing in industry. It's a drama which inspires a spirit of teamwork, of mutual trust and cooperation, of good-fellowship, honesty, fair-play and unselfishness: In short, as described to me by the miners, it looks like horse-sense religion, based on the golden rule.

A William (Bill) Yates, branch president of the National Union of Miners at the famous Victoria pit, North Staffordshire, was one of the group with whom I talked over the luncheon table. His pit has been far exceeding its target since the comparatively recent advent of "The Forgotten Factor." Bill is as hard as nails, and a man of few and blunt words. I ask him how production had risen and why. He replied:

"THE WIFE AND I used not to agree. We were on the edge of breaking up. And I took my unhappiness to the pit. So when the manager and I met, we used to do a good deal of banging the table. There was constant trouble. Then I went to see "The Forgotten Factor." We got things straight at home. I went to the manager and said: 'Let's run this pit the moral rearmament way.' He agreed—and the men like it much better. We haven't had a single row or stoppage since then.

"The increased output is due to the new honesty and unselfishness produced by M.R.A."

There's a lot more to the story, but one striking point is this: The consultative committees, representing labor and management, of 150 pits from every coal field in Britain have asked for this moral re-armament play to be shown in their localities.

So the moral rehabilitation spreads, just as it also is doing on the European continent—a mighty lift to a troubled world.

AFTER walking the gang plank in their first three starts this season, the Cardington Pirates basketball team launched a series of successful raids in and out of Morrow county that have sent down 12 straight enemy crews.... The flag most recently struck in deference to the Cardington Jolly Roger was that of mighty Caledonia, second placers in the Marion county league and winners of 13 games in 15 attempts.... In out-of-county warfare the Pirates have plundered such choice aggregations as Ashley and Galena of Delaware county, Lexington of Richland, and Pleasant of Marion....They are sailing second in the Morrow county league, abreast with Edison, but behind Johnsville.

EDISON took the wind out of the Cardington sails in their season opener, and Johnsville and Fredericktown followed in quick succession, but the Pirates have been on the right track since ... They face one of their stiffest remaining tests at Marengo tonight, and after anticipated breathers with Iberia and Chesterville, wind up the season with Mt. Gilead and Johnsville. They have a practice game with Ohio Wesleyan freshmen next Monday.

THE PIRATE CREW includes guard Lewis Levering, a sharp man on defense and the Pirate's pirate when it comes to ball stealing; a high-scoring duo in lanky Bill Maxwell, six-foot-one center, and stubby Dewey Yake, five-foot-five guard; and a pair of tall forwards in Kent Curl and Paul Bowman.

CAPTAIN of the crew and the beau of Cardington is Coach Dennis Bell, who came to Cardington from the Navy and Defiance college last fall to pilot the Pirates in their first plunge into football since 1910.

QUENTIN BRELSFORD, Ohio Wesleyan's star long-distance runner, will run against Gil Dodds and a pack of four other top milers tomorrow night in the Wanamaker mile of the annual Millrose game in Madison Square Garden ...Dodds, Boston preacher, is a heavy favorite to win. He won the Knights of Columbus mile in 4:08.4 at Boston last Saturday and was two seconds off his best pace at that....Other milers entered in the indoor meet are Leslie MacMitchell, New York A. C.; Gerald Karver, Penn State; Browning Ross, Villanova; and Bill Mack, Michigan State.

Olympic Winter Games Open Despite Ice Hockey Dispute

By The Associated Press

ST. MORITZ, SWITZERLAND, Jan. 30—The fifth winter Olympics opened in this majestic Alpine valley today under the shadow of a bitter United States hockey controversy that left the status of the sport in doubt.

The dispute over whether Olympic hockey will be played remained unresolved as crack athletes from 28 nations marched in the colorful opening parade.

"Hockey is definitely out of the Olympic program," Avery Brundage, head of the American Olympic delegation, said shortly before the parade started.

But barely an hour after the ceremonies, the U. S. Amateur Hockey Association team began playing Switzerland in what had been billed as the first event of the Olympic but angry feuding persisted over whether it really was an Olympic game.

The International Olympic committee earlier had voted 16 to 10 to bar both the A.H.A. and the U. S. Olympic committee hockey squads from the competition. But the Swiss organizing committee insisted the A.H.A. team should play.

U. S. Team Bows

The United States team bowed to Switzerland, 5-4.

There was still doubt the hockey competition would be recognized as an official Olympic event and an authoritative Swiss source said the Olympics committee has threatened to cancel the entire fifth winter Olympics tomorrow if hockey continues.

Upsets Shift Standings In Tri-City League

The Tri-City league junior high school basketball teams are having a hectic time this week in their basketball games with upsets all over the place.

Yesterday afternoon, Central was heading the league with a 4-1 record, and Edison and Bucyrus were tied for second place with 3-1 records.

Now, after Central was surprised by fourth place Vernon yesterday, 35-29, and after Edison was upset by Bucyrus, 23-20, Bucyrus heads the league with a 4-1 record and Central holds second place with 4-2, while Edison is in third place slot with a 3-2 record.

In the Vernon-Central scrap, Bender paced Vernon with 14 counters while Daum did the same for Central, also getting 14 markers.

Bucyrus, in licking Edison was led by Witter with 14 tallies while Edison's hottest man was Craft with seven points.

Field Well Scrambled In Tucson Golf Match

By The Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 30—A well scrambled field takes off on the the second round of the frigid 72-hole $10,000 Tucson open golf tourney today with wiry and intent Dave Douglas from Wilmington, Del., two strokes in front of the pack.

A flock of the nation's lesser-known names shows signs of causing trouble for the game's big guns although Bobby Locke of South Africa, winner of the recent Phoenix open, is only four strokes off the pace and Ben Hogan one digit behind him with a two-under-par 68.

Frank Stranahan, Toledo amateur, led the simonpures and most of the pros with a 68.

For Sale: One Cincinnati Shortstop Who'll Keep His Big Mouth Shut

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, Jan. 30—Eddie Miller, that rugged individualist who has played shortstop for the Cincinnati Reds since 1943, says he'll try to keep his "big mouth shut for a change" should the club realize its ambition of peddling the veteran infielder.

Club President Warren Giles and Manager Johnny Neun last night announced in New York, where they'll attend the National league's annual meeting opening today, that they were willing to trade Miller to any other team in the circuit.

"We want to make the best player deal," said Giles and Neun in a joint statement.

"We have discussed the Eddie Miller situation thoroughly," they said, "and are announcing to all National league clubs at the meeting Friday that Miller's contract is available to any club in the National league."

Miller, who became a tenant of Giles' doghouse at Hamilton, O., a couple of weeks ago with a blast at the Reds' policies, management and several of its players, had this to say in Cincinnati:

"I thought the Reds would make an attempt to trade me. I think it would be best for the team if I were traded. I know that some of the boys were hurt by what I said during the past two weeks, although I had no intention of hurting them. I will do the best I can for whatever team I am traded to and also will do my best to keep my big mouth shut for a change."

The Chicago Cubs, Philadelphia Phillies and the Pittsburgh Pirates will probably attempt to land Miller as the other four teams appear set at shortstop.

Wrestling Matches End In 1 Decision, 1 Draw

Paul Orth won one of the double wrestling matches at the Armory last night, beating Len Hughes by a decision, but referees failed to reach a decision in the other 90-minute match between Renee LaBell and Jack Poppenheim and it ended a draw.

Renee LaBell won the first fall in his match with Jack Poppenheim, while Jack came back and took the second fall. In a fast and clean third fall which ran the match to the full 90 minutes, no decision could be reached and the match ended in a draw.

Len Hughes took the first fall in his match with Paul Orth, but Hughes was then disqualified for roughness and illegal holds, and the match went to Orth by decision.

LOUIS GIVES BOXING LESSON TO FOXWORTH

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Jan. 30—"Just how far has Joe Louis slipped,"—the big question that has been puzzling the boxing world for the past two months—remained as puzzling as ever today with this exception:

The Brown Bomber, at the age of 33, is no longer the devastating bomber of old when he knocked out 22 in 25 title defenses over a 10-year span. Age is catching up to him very rapidly.

The world's heavyweight champion last night engaged in his first test with the gloves since his disputed split decision over Jersey Joe Wolcott in New York last Dec. 5. He gave Bob Foxworth, 177, a one-sided boxing lesson in a four-round exhibition.

Foxworth, 24 years old East St. Louis, Ill., aspirant to the light heavyweight championship, had won 16 out of 18 bouts, 14 by knockouts. However, he offered no line on Louis since he had never met him before; was outweighed by 43 pounds; lacked height and weight to match Louis'; was outclassed and obviously scared stiff.

Louis won every round easily although the Illinois State Athletic Commission would not permit a decision. The timid Foxworth was always in retreat, aiming to keep out of danger.

Louis said he weighed 220 pounds. He certainly looked it. There were tiny rolls of fat rippling over his mid-section. But he plodded in from the opening gong and delivered his punches like lightning flashes. He didn't move fast, but his hands did. They wore the big 16-ounce gloves.

Stone's, Commercial, Martel Win Y Thursday Loop Games

Stone's Commercial and Martel set the pace last night at the Y.M.C.A. as they took victories from Cooler, Pollak and Sally Ann in the order named.

Stone's and Cooler played the closest game as both teams displayed tight defenses and weak offenses. Cooler failed to make good on short shots in the first two frames, came back in the second half to outplay the Stone's combine but were denied a victory when time ran out on them. Busler took scoring honors for the Stone's quint with 11 points while Wynn had high points in the game with 13 for Cooler as Stone's won 33-28.

Commercial handed Pollak a 65-33 walloping in their lop-sided win as Frank and Reeder combined to push in 44 points, Frank getting a big 26 total and Reeder following with 18. For the Pollak Steelers, Schorr set the pace with 12 markers.

In the Martel-Sally Ann game, Freet was top man with 16 points as he and the Martel crew licked Sally Ann, 53-35. Sally Ann's team made a real contest of the first half with Rose playing a whale of a game as he collected eight counters, but slowed in the second half when Rose was injured and left the game.

Sports Chatter On This & That

By FRITZ HOWELL
Ohio AP Sports Editor

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 30—This and that from around and about:

"If the governor of Ohio will quit taking our Indiana girls, then Purdue will quit taking Ohio boys."

So says Stu Holcomb, grid coach of the Boilermakers, to whom more than a dozen highly-rated Buckeye scholastic stars have flocked. The former Miami U. head coach and West Point assistant was kidding as he referred to the recent wedding of Ohio Gov. Thomas J. Herbert and Miss Mildred Stevenson of Indianapolis, but he didn't have his tongue in his cheek during the rest of a recent talk at Zanesville's University club.

"Ohio has too many good high school football players, and Indiana doesn't have enough, so we think we are entitled to some of the Buckeye boys," Stu declared.

Holcomb also said Ohio State fans probably could look forward to another poor season next fall, but that "Wes Fesler is a sound person and will do a good job." Stu then was presented by the club with "letters of introduction to the three members of the All-Ohio squad you have not yet contacted."

CY YOUNG, the 81-year-old Tuscarawas county pitching great who piled up 511 major league victories for an unapproached record, admits the hurler of decades ago had a bigger edge.

"In my day a pitcher could pitch a ball game," Young declares. "We could use the spit and emery balls, the pill was deader, and the fences longer. Now they've shortened the fences practically everywhere, and all freak pitches have been banned. You have to bear down on every batter now."

Cy said three things helped him hang up his big mark—good control, the fact he never had a sore arm, and his method of checking on what rival batters could hit.

"I was continually writing to other pitchers in the league asking what certain guys could hit," Cy said, "and they never got a look at that kind of ball while I was pitching. But the big thing in those days was that a pitcher didn't have to throw past all the batters to win a game, for the fielders had a better chance to do their stuff."

OHIO CAGER 2ND HIGHEST SCORER

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 30—Nate DeLong of the River Falls (Wis.) Teachers, retained his No. 1 spot last week at the top of the nation's small college individual basketball scorers.

The latest compilation by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau for games through Jan. 24 showed today Delong now has tallied 349 points on 115 field goals and 119 free throws in 13 games for an average of 26.8.

Eppa Rixey of Kenyon (Ohio) college, son of the former baseball pitcher, likewise retained the runnerup spot with 202 points in eight games for 25.2.

Muskingum is fifth in team offensive with 648 points in 10 games for an average of 64.8.

Capital of Ohio, is the best team at the free throw line converting 116 of 169 chances for a percentage of .686.

Southwest Louisiana has committed the fewest personal fouls as a team with an average of 12.0 followed by Heidelberg at 12.1.

OLIVER NETS 39, BUT RIO GRANDE LOSES

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 30—Newt Oliver, the one-man-team of tiny Rio Grande college, proved conclusively today that five men are better than one on any basketball court.

Points rained from the pumping arms of Rio Grande's ace, like buckshot from a sawed off shotgun, and he netted 39 of them last night. But Youngstown won, 78-63.

Other scores last night:

Kenyon 63, Heidelberg 58; Wilberforce State 60, Wilmington 47; Ohio Northern 64, Ashland 47; Dayton 54, Detroit 50, and Milligan 80, Cincinnati Bible Seminary 30.

Oliver, always a point-maker of note, has been terrific of late. He swished home 59 points Wednesday night against Wilberforce Church. That was enough for a 118-116 win in a triple-overtime, triple-weird contest.

In two days, Oliver hiked his season's total to 448 points for 18 games.

Even so, Newt was a bit pressed for honors last night. Forward Charles Bush counted 33 points for Youngstown, enabling his team to hold a 39-29 halftime edge.

REDS STIR UP NEW TROUBLE FOR U.S.

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Jan. 30—The Russians and German Communists are using the displaced persons problem in western Germany to create anti-American and anti-British sentiment among both Germans and DPs, according to U.S. documentary reports.

The campaign the Communists are waging is a double one. They tell the Germans one thing and the displaced persons another, but all the propaganda is aimed against the western powers.

In Berlin's Russian-controlled newspapers the approximately 700,000 DPs in the American and British zones are denounced as "pests" and "bloodsuckers" and "parasites on the German economy."

Meanwhile in the DP camps, according to American intelligence reports, the Communists are attempting to create distrust and unrest in order to make trouble for the western occupying powers.

In propaganda directed at the Germans the Russians depict the DPs as a criminal element. Especially heated are their attacks against that majority of the DPs who came from Poland, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania and who now are resisting repatriation to areas behind the iron curtain.

In all these persistent newspaper attacks on the DPs, the Russians and German Communists never mention that the Germans themselves are responsible for these peoples' plight. Most of the DPs were brought forcibly to Germany as slave labor by the Nazis.

U.S. BEAUTY STILL SPURNS HOLLYWOOD

By The Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 30—Hollywood is still hounding Miss America of 1947 but the tall Tennessee beauty persistently declines all offers, because "love is more important."

"I only want to be a successful doctor wife," says the nation's beauty queen, Barbara Jo Walker. This continues to amaze movieland and thousands of screen hopefuls.

Barbara's latest rejection slip went to David O. Selznick who asked her to discuss a contract with him in New York, all expenses paid, of course.

The producer received a courteous reply of refusal to this effect: "I'm simply not interested."

Her attitude is simple and, the way Barbara tells it, quite convincing:

"I have no desire to lead the type of life that you must in Hollywood. I have my own ideals and private life is what counts."

Barbara has made no attempt to capitalize on the Miss America title. Although she averages about four personal appearances weekly; these are generally charity connected. She has signed no advertising endorsements.

Why did she enter the contest? Only for the $5,000 scolarship fund. That award may be employed for any educational purpose. Last month she used some of the money to buy a piano to help with her music studies. She also will take graduate study in French and English through the fund.

If you wish to travel and continue your education and earn good pay at the same time, the Regular Army has a solution for you. If you qualify for enlistment, you can sign up for three years or more with one of the famous combat divisions in Japan—the 11th Airborne, or the 24th or 25th Infantry.
